Moscow developed a station for fast charging of several electric vehicles at once

Moscow has developed an electric charging station (ECS) for several electric vehicles at once. The project is completely domestic - from components to software, Mayor of the city Sergey Sobyenin said in his telegram channel.

"The station can charge three electric vehicles at the same time, on average from 10-20 to 40-60 minutes. The development is intended for installation at urban sites, in residential areas or cottage settlements. It is equipped with current leakage protection and an emergency charge stop button," he wrote.
