Energy consumption in Russia increased by 1.56% since the beginning of the year

Since the beginning of the year, electricity consumption in Russia has grown by 1.56% in annual terms. This was reported to journalists by the Deputy Minister of Energy of the Russian Federation Yevgeny Grabchak. "Since the beginning of the year [growth] - 1.56%. This is as of 7 November," he stressed. The Deputy Minister explained that this is an indicator without taking into account the temperature factor. At the same time, Grabchak did not provide data on energy consumption for October.
