Grids reached the Supreme Court

Small grid companies have asked the Supreme Court to overturn the government's severe restrictions on private entities. According to the plaintiffs, about 1,000 players may go bankrupt, which will lead to market monopolization, tariff growth and the number of accidents. The industry and analysts warn that the most cost-effective players may leave the market. In the Ministry of Energy and Rosseti, on the contrary, they expect an increase in the reliability of energy supply and containment of tariffs. Lawyers also doubt that private players will be able to win the court.
