Russia intends to maintain energy availability for the population and business until 2050, - the Ministry of Energy

Russia sets itself the task of maintaining the availability of energy for the population and business at adequate prices until 2050. This goal has become one of the main goals in the country's new energy strategy, said First Deputy Minister of Energy of Russia Pavel Sorokin at the "NRB Climate Forum 2024" on Monday, 12 February.

Other objectives of the strategy will be achieving climate neutrality and environmental friendliness, as well as technological sovereignty.
