The Ministry of Energy of the Russian Federation to prepare a program for development of energy capacities in the Far East

The economic growth of the Far East has led to a shortage of energy capacity in the macroregion, so the Russian Ministry of Energy will prepare a program for development of the region's energy sector. This statement was made by Deputy Prime Minister Yury Trutnev in Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk. According to him, by 2030 the shortage of electric power in the Far East will be at least three GW. He also noted that the problem of constructing the second stage of Sakhalin GRES Power Plant-2 has already been discussed in the Cabinet of Ministers, but the issue of financing remains open.
